

Romeo Y Julieta Reserve Maduro Belicoso

This line of cigars by Romeo y Julieta is extremely limited because of the triple fermented Maduro Connecticut wrapper that they use. Very few if any at all cigar manufactures triple ferment there maduro tobaccos because of the time and extensive labor that is involved. What you get however is a cigar that is so dark in color that it looks like the finest dark chocolate that you can buy. Not only does this cigar look good but also gives you a hearty and smooth smoking experience full of deep, rich flavors and a one of a kind aroma.

Looking of this cigar the first thing that jumps out I the rich dark chocolate color, there are very few cigars that I have seen in our humidor with the dark brown almost black color. There are only a couple of veins that I can see throughout this cigar, the cigar itself is nice and firm and is a Belicoso size cigar so you have the torpedo end to make out of so you do not get all of the loose tobacco in your mouth. The prelight was sweet smelling with cocoa and an earthy aroma.

Toasting the foot of this cigar and thought the first third, it gave off a medium-bodied smoke with a nutty, coffee flavor. Like most Maduro cigars, it is an earthy smoke...and unlike many Maduro cigars, it's light-bodied throughout the first half. Therefore, to sum it up the first third was sweet, earthy, chocolaty, and woody flavors with a perfect draw.

The Middle of the cigar remains the same, a medium-bodied smoke with a little sweetness followed up with chocolate and coffee.

Getting down to the nub the flavor starts to change in to a full on medium bodied smoke, giving off leather, pepper with just the right amount of sweetness with bittersweet chocolate undertones.

Overall, this cigar is a true winner coming from a great cigar company that does not over fancy themselves. It has a great rustic deep brown appearance with a good bur and draw. It is on the medium side of maduro but kicks in the aromatics and flavors like only Romeo y Juliet cigars can do. This a good oily stick with great flavors and a limited supply. 9 out of 10 in my humble opinion.
